

What regions do you cover?

We work nationwide and with international clients. Our trainers are local experts with local knowledge to support your organisation and managers.

Is the delivery face to face?

We offer face to face in-person training, virtual remote training, and a hybrid mix of both.

Do you have online only programmes?

Yes, we have our own learning and development portal for organisations and individuals to access training and development at their own speed and pace.

What is the maximum and minimum number of delegates per session?

Six is an ideal minimum, however, depending on the client's needs we can work with smaller groups for training. We deliver sessions to groups of 12, 15, 20 and even seminar-style sessions to over 60 delegates. There is no limit depending on the organisational need.

What are your prices?

Learning and Development is an investment and we want clients to get the best return on investment and help change practices for managers, individuals and organisations. As an example, the fee for a six-session bespoke programme would be £183 per person per session (plus VAT) for a group of 8. Or for a bespoke programme also including extended support and coaching sessions £249 per person per session (plus VAT) for a group of 8.

Do you supply resources etc?

In the first session we supply portfolios (when face to face, and electronic for our virtual programme) , learning materials and information to aid managers building up a library of management information and support.

What is the delivery style in the sessions?

We work with organisations to deliver sessions that appeal to their team; among other methods this includes working in small groups, working individually, discussing topics, watching videos, presenting your ideas and solutions, and having group discussions.

Is there role play?

Some managers are initially unwilling to be involved in role-play in front of their peers. However, if we have budding actors and they want to demonstrate an example to the group, we encourage it. As a note, by the end of the training sessions managers can be more articulate and confident when speaking and presenting in a group situation. This is one of the many benefits of working with us.